

May | 2022

- Waiting In With Windows 11 Update
- Microsoft NCE Licensing changes

WINDOWS 11 – SHOULD YOU UPGRADE?

Windows 11 has been released for a few months now, and we see new computers being shipped with the new Windows 11 operating system. A few clients are running it currently and there has not been any major issues reported. We still recommend Windows 10 as the primary for compatibility reasons with older software. Hardware requirements exclude any machine that is older than 2018 from being upgraded. If you want to try Windows 11 operating systems, contact us and we will distribute a few test machines to you.

MICROSOFT LICENSING CHANGES

Microsoft is changing the terms and some pricing of its Office 365 licensing. The biggest change is 20% premium for month-to-month pricing need to commit to the number of licensing. Unlike before you are also required to use the full 1 year term, but the license can be moved between users if needed. but if you have more questions or need assistance please reach out to us.

While we are on the topic of reviewing Office 365, we would also like to bring up backups. We offer backups because making backups of collected data is critically important in the event of a primary data failure such as hardware failure, virus attacks, power failure and or accidental deletion of data. Backups can help save time and money if these failures occur. AIM has the infrastructure to offer Veeam Office 365 Backups to all clients. Backups are pulled directly from Microsoft with no dependencies on local software or hardware with each client. With cheap per GB storage costs, you can easily add months if not years of retention.

REFER A FRIEND

SHARE US!

Do you know of a business that could benefit from our services?

Let us know.

Meet Your IT Tech: Carson Gardner

Carson Gardner Started out at AIM with little technology training other than being just a bit tech savvy.

He began as an admin assistant while taking some network classes. Soon after, he joined our IT department and over the years he has become one of our top IT Specialist.

Follow us
AIM IT Services LLC